Babel 17 By Samuel R
Babel-17 is a 1966 science fiction novel by American writer Samuel R. Delany in which the Sapir-Whorf hypothesis (that language influences thought and perception) plays an important part. It was joint winner of the Nebula Award for Best Novel in 1967 (with Flowers for Algernon) and was also nominated for the Hugo Award for Best Novel in 1967.

Babel-17 - Wikipedia
Babel-17 is all about the power of language. Humanity, which has spread throughout the universe, is involved in a war with the Invaders, who have been covertly assassinating officials and sabotaging spaceships. The only clues humanity has to go on are strange alien messages that have been intercepted in space.

Babel-17 by Samuel R. Delany - Goodreads
For the first time, Babel-17 is published as the author intended with the short novel Empire Star, the tale of Comet Jo, a simple-minded teen thrust into a complex galaxy when he's entrusted to carry a vital message to a distant world. Spellbinding and smart, both novels are testimony to Delany's vast and singular talent.

Babel-17 is a language itself which we do not understand. "I think—" General Forester tried to smile—"what you're trying to tell me is that because it isn't a code, but rather an alien language, we might as well give up." If this were defeat, receiving it from her was almost relief. But she shook her head.

Samuel R. Delany Quotes (Author of Babel-17)
Samuel R. Delany's 1967 Babel-17 is amazingly able to fail at one, but given the secondary and tertiary layers worked into the overall premise, succeeds. Dated for the theory it depends on, the Sapir-Whorf hypothesis, the novel's prose never lets the reader down, the hypothesis proving useful in a lateral manner.
