A rate law is an expression which relates that rate of a reaction to the rate constant and the concentrations of the reactants. A rate constant,  $k$ , is a proportionality constant for a given reaction. The general rate law is usually expressed as: (13)  $\text{Rate} = k [A]^s [B]^t$

A general rule for most (not all) chemical reactions is that the rate at which the reaction proceeds will approximately double for each 10-degree Celsius increase in temperature. Once the temperature reaches a certain point, some of the chemical species may be altered (e.g., denaturing of proteins) and the chemical reaction will slow or stop.

Factors That Affect the Chemical Reaction Rate

So the rate of reaction, the average rate of reaction, would be equal to 0.02 divided by 2, which is 0.01 molar per second. So that's our average rate of reaction from time is equal to 0 to time is equal to 2 seconds.

Rate of reaction (video) | Kinetics | Khan Academy

The average reaction rate remains constant for a given time period so it can certainly not give any idea about the rate of reaction at a particular instant. This is where the instantaneous rate of reaction comes into the picture. Instantaneous rate of reaction is the rate at which the reaction is proceeding at any given time.
